HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN HAS BEEN POSTPONED UNTIL LATER DATE

Failure of Monessen to Cooperate Will Make New Plans Imperative

WANT MORE FAVORABLE TIME

At a meeting of the general committee in charge of the new hospital campaign, held in the borough building, Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, it was decided to recommend to the Board of Directors of the Hospital Association that the financial campaign be postponed until a more favorable time.

The motion to postpone was debated at length, at which the various phases were thoroughly discussed and reasons advanced for taking this step. The attitude of the Monessen representatives was very disappointing, and their action in the matter was the cause of considerable comment, as well as mild criticism. It was pointed out that the scope of the campaign was enlarged in order to accommodate the people from Monessen, and their wishes in the matter of selecting a committee to look over and recommend a site was adopted without a dissenting vote by the Charleroi representatives. Including Donora in the campaign was an afterthought, and as a number of speakers said, but little was really expected of the big steel town down the river in the way of assistance, not that they were opposed to the project, but because of difficulties that might exist in reaching the new hospital.

The representatives at the meeting yesterday afternoon realized that it would be impossible to carry out the plans as originally laid down to raise $250,000 at the present time, and it was deemed advisable to wait until conditions were normal, when the campaign plans will be revived and drafted on a different basis.

It was the opinion of those present yesterday afternoon that the new hospital must be provided, but owing to circumstances they could not control deemed it expedient to defer the campaign until a later date. Mr. Holzman, who was here to organize the campaign, left last night for his home in Harrisburg.

MONUMENT AND TABLET FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

Plans are being made for erection of a monument and a bronze tablet in honor of 200 service men from East Bethlehem township. More than $1,400 has been raised by popular subscription and plans are under way for one of the biggest celebrations of the kind held in years in Beallsville. Four men from that section were killed in action and about 40 wounded.

Notice P. H. C. Members. There will be a meeting of the general committee of the P. H. C. at the home of Mrs. Frank Kline, Monday evening, August 18, at 8 o'clock, to make final arrangements to participate in the parade August 21.

By order of President,

CORONER'S JURY CENSURES DRIVER

Coroner Heffran held an inquest in Monongahela on Friday to inquire into the death of Ernest Castagna, a boy aged about 8 years who died in the Memorial hospital from injuries received when struck by an automobile. After hearing the evidence the jury returned a verdict in which the driver of the car, Arthur Forney was freed of any criminal responsibility, but he was censured for not blowing his horn on approaching the children who were at play in the street. The accident happened a few days ago at Factory street in Monongahela.

LEGION ENTHUSES OVER THE PARADE

The Charleroi post of the American Legion held a very enthusiastic meeting in the new Municipal Building. There was a large attendance, and many new members were added to the roll of the Post. The local Post is very enthusiastic about the homecoming celebration which the people of Charleroi and community are giving for the returned soldiers on Aug. 21st.

The Post declares itself in favor of all soldiers participating in the parade in uniform.

The Citizen's Celebration Committee, which also had a meeting in the Municipal Building last night asked the Legion to invite returned soldiers from the neighboring towns to participate in the celebration which invitation was heartily endorsed by the Legion.

From sentiment shown at the meeting the celebration on the 21st will be a record making event for Charleroi nothing of the kind having ever been held in Charleroi before.

HUCKSTER LOST OUT ON DEAL

Some one passed a fake $10 bill on a Donora huckster in Monessen a few days ago, which he did not discover until the following day. The huckster was making his rounds in Monessen at the time when he was handed what purported to be a ten-spot, for a small purchase, he in turn giving $9.25 in change as well as the produce purchased. When he discovered his loss he returned to Monessen and endeavored to have the guilty party arrested.

He charged a woman customer with the trick, but a hearing held later he failed to prove his case and she was discharged. The huckster, however, was forced to pay $5.30 in the way of costs. The "$10" bill proved to be the advertisement of a Monongahela business house.

Rev. Charles Fries, O. S. B., of St. Bernard College, Culman, Alabama, is spending the month of August with his brother, Rev. William D. Fries, pastor of St. Jerome's church.

All Chairmen of the various committees for the Home-Coming Celebration to be held on Thursday next are requested to meet with Prof. I. T. Daniel, chairman of the program committee, at the Borough Building THIS EVENING at 7:30 o'clock, to furnish data for the program. It is important that every chairman be present or at least have a representative there who can give the desired information. These chairmen are:

H. W. Scott, Executive.
W. H. Milliken, Finance.
George Leith, Decorating.
R. H. Rush, Reception.
F. W. Pieper, Entertainment.
S. L. Woodward, Music.
J. B. Tussing, Parade.
Major Edwin McKay, Military.
J. E. Masters, Speakers.

A representative of the sports committee is also asked to be present.

Two Men are Held on Charge of Murder for Buckholdt's Death

A coroner's jury, composed of Paul Kimmins, Joseph Pearson, William Vetter, B. E. Wilson, Joseph Entrott, and Charles Brown, to inquire into the death of Charles Buckholdt at the local hospital early Thursday morning, and which met at the Frye morgue Friday evening, returned the following verdict:

"That Charles Buckholdt came to his death at the Charleroi-Monessen hospital, August 14th, from shock and hemorrhages due to stab wounds in the neck and body. We find further that said stab wounds were inflicted by a knife in the hands of James McMonigal and August Kern and recommend that said James McMonigal, and August Kern be held to await the action of the grand jury on the charge of murder of Charles Buckholdt."

Much testimony preceded the finding of this verdict. Dr. McKay testified of the number and character of the wounds, and the cause of death; Officer Welsh telling of the arrest of Kern at the office of Dr. Barth, and the finding of his straw hat with its broken and blood-stained crown; the arrest of McMonigal by Officer Corey, who said the prisoner remarked when taken, "How bad is he cut?" It was also testified by L. C. Wolfe and of Mrs. Wright, who testified that while he was going down the alley that she saw the men several times lay to the scene of the trouble he saw from her kitchen window, and that all two men coming out, which aroused of them appeared to be intoxicated. His curiosity, because all the people was dressed in a light suit and a gray whom he identified as McMonigal, appeared to be gambling and at times dark coat. He appeared to be directing the players seemed to be quite irritating McMonigal to get away. McMonigal told of the man in the light suit suddenly running away, after which she later. On his person was found a knife on which were fresh blood stains. Other testimony of a less important character was presented, after which the jury returned the verdict as given above.

APPROVE BRIDGE OVER PIGEON CREEK

The grand jury on Friday approved the proposed concrete arch, known as Pigeon creek bridge No. 27, on the Ellsworth-Scenery Hill road. It was laid before the jury on petition of the commissioners and order of court. The arch will replace a worn out covered bridge. The estimated cost is $15,000. The span of the new structure will be 54 feet.

ALL SOLDIERS TO APPEAR IN UNIFORM

Those in charge of the military section of the parade to take place next Thursday wish it understood that all returned soldiers who march with the military contingent are to appear in uniform. At a meeting of Charleroi Post No. 22, held in the public meeting room of the borough building last evening, this feature was discussed at length, and the men passed a resolution emphasizing this feature. They want full uniform, and will so appear. All visiting soldiers, to secure the courtesies of the day, are also requested to come in uniform. By observing this regulation much confusion will be avoided on the day of the celebration. Everything will be open to the soldiers, but in order to secure the courtesies it will be necessary to wear the uniform.

SAYS HIS FORD CAR IS A HOODOO

Joe Franks, who owned one of the Ford cars stolen by the Allen-Jennings combination, had so much trouble with the machine that he decided to dispose of it entirely. His car was stolen last winter in Monongahela, while he was playing for a dance at Armory hall. The car was recovered by the Charleroi police and later turned over to Joe.

The other night some unknown thief entered the garage in which he keeps the machine and made away with it. However, the thief failed to fill up the water tank and the car was abandoned after it had run several blocks. Franks did not know the car had been stolen until informed by the Monessen police that it had been found standing in the middle of the street. Joe has decided that the car is a hoodoo and wants to dispose of it.

CLASS GOVERNMENT.

The American Federation of Labor is within its rights in advocating government ownership and management of the railroads, but the railway rights when they not only demand the same in notice served upon the President and Congress but threaten to force compliance through a strike of all the railway unions aggregating 2,200,000 men, an act of violence that would completely paralyze the country's business. There is no real difference in principle between forcing the government itself by a powerful faction seeking its own selfish ends.

The population represented by the 2,200,000 railroad operatives is not more and is probably less than a tenth of the population of this country. Shall ten million force their will upon a hundred million by threats to bring about industrial paralysis? If organized labor can strike to bring about government ownership of public utilities, it can strike to save or defeat the peace treaty, to establish the policy of free trade or protection, to command Congress and the Executive in order to control in the matter of any or all public policies. The proposition would be laughable for its absurdity if it were not so revolutionary. It is not the American method for one class to dictate to all the other classes in the matter of legislation and it is not going to be the American method, as the railway brotherhoods will find in due course. Moreover, the war experiment of government management of railroads failed to win popular applause and it may as well be taken for granted that the nation's consent to permanent government management will not be readily gained even after deliberate inquiry into the proposition.

LAW FOR PROFITEERS

In connection with the subject of excessive living costs there is much talk of new law to reach profiteers and trusts; but there would seem to be far less need of new law than the enforcement of existing law. The Lever act, for example, not only makes it unlawful to destroy food in order to limit the supply and raise the price, but declares it to be a punishable offense to permit waste or deterioration of foodstuffs; to create a monopoly or attempt to create a monopoly, locally or generally, of any necessities; to engage in unfair practices in handling or dealing with any necessities; to conspire, combine, agree or arrange with any other person to limit the facilities for transportation, producing, harvesting, manufacturing, supplying, storing or dealing in any necessities to restrict the supply of necessities; or to exact excessive prices for any necessities, or to aid and abet the doing of anything made unlawful by the act.

We are not lacking in laws to check and punish the grasping greed that exacts its heavy toll from the people; what we are lacking in is the vigorous enforcement of those laws. Congress may well consider the menacing problem of living costs, but the more urgent need is definite and vigorous action by the Department of Justice and its representatives throughout the country.

VON TIRPITZ, TOO

The plan to try the former Kaiser has not been given up, as has been supposed, but will actually take place after the peace treaty has been ratified according to Andrew Bonar Law's announcement on August 6 in the House of Commons. The scope of the evidence to be submitted remains to be seen, but we may rest assured that the tribunal summoning of William Hohenzollern to its bar will take no account of the "revelations" made by Von Tirpitz in his frantic efforts to clear his skirts.

Von Tirpitz has been popularly and no doubt with good reasons regarded as both the father of the sea terrorism and the personal director of ruthless submarine warfare but in his memoirs he unblushingly denies that he was in any way concerned and names Admiral von Pohl and Chancellor von Bethman-Hollweg as the guilty responsibilities. Von Tirpitz even asserts that he opposed submarine warfare, and that his only ambition was to lead the surface fleet and lead it out to battle—in an emotion that is a justification because of the former Kaiser's lack of decision and unwillingness to take risks. Von Tirpitz's labored plea makes it clearer than ever that the chief aim of the Kaiser's war advisors at present is to save their own skins and that nothing more can be expected of them than frenzied efforts to put the blame upon others.

Eskimos' Festival of Masks.

When the winter solstice approaches, the Eskimos of Alaska get ready for their great annual festival of the masks. The Eskimos have the artistic instinct highly developed, and the masks worn by their dancers who take the parts of gods and goddesses, devils and various supernatural animals, such as the wolf and bear—"ancients" of all the wolf and bear tribes—are most cleverly sculptured. The leading part in the festival of the winter solstice, the object of which is to persuade the sun to return to the north, is always taken by a man wearing a mask that represents the sun. Other performers wear on their heads "finger masks" of the sun god, fringed with white hair from the reindeer's belly, for rays. And not least conspicuous in the ceremonial is an actor masked to represent the moon.

Insects That Sing.

Among the natural curiosities of Japan are singing insects. The most prized of these is a black beetle named "susumushi," which means "insect bell." The sound that it emits resembles that of a little silver bell.

No Monotony in Nature.

"One of the greatest curses of mill or factory work, and with much city work of all kinds, is its interminable monotony; the same process repeated hour after hour and day after day," writes David Grayson in the American Magazine. "In the country there is indeed monotonous work, but rarely monotony. No task continues very long; everything changes infinitely with the seasons. Processes are not repetitive but creative. Nature hates monotony is ever changing and restless, brings up a storm to drive the haymakers from their hurried work in the fields, sends rain to stop the plowing, or a frost to hurry the apple harvest. Everything is full of adventure and vicissitude! A man who has been a farmer for two hours at the mowing, must suddenly turn blacksmith when his machine breaks down and tinker with wrench and hammer, and later in the day he becomes dairyman, farrier, harnessmaker, merchant. No kind of wheat but is grist to his mill, no knowledge that he cannot use! And who is freer to be a citizen than he? Freer to take his part in town meetings and serve his state in some one of the innumerable small offices which form the solid blocks of organization beneath our commonwealth."

Cape Horn Storms.

The waters of Cape Horn have never been unvisited by storms for more than a week or two at a stretch within the memory of man. Standing on the outpost of the world, Cape Horn is the meeting place of ocean currents of very different temperatures, from the icy cold waters of the Antarctic drift to the warmth of the Brazilian and Peruvian return currents. The prevailing winds are from the northwest and west, and these, coming from the warm regions of the Pacific, condense into fogs which the sailors call Cape Horn blankets and which are the sure forerunners of storms. The extremely low levels to which the glaciers of Tierra del Fuego descend, soil, the meeting of conflicting winds of very different temperatures, are all direct causes combining to make this the most constantly stormy region in the world.

Great Deeds of Serbians.

The deeds of the Serbians and of Kara George their leader, are so remarkable, according to a recent historian, that even legend can hardly exaggerate them. A handful of rayahs arises suddenly, routs great Turkish armies, besieges citadels, alternately defends and defeats passing, and finally wins its independence by its own bravery. There is no case in which a single small power in the Balkans has done so much without more aid from the great powers. What Greece owed to Canning, Roumania to Louis Napoleon, and Bulgaria to Tsar Alexander, the tiny states of Serbia and Montenegro owed to themselves. The latter maintained, the former achieved, her liberty in the face of the whole Turkish empire.

Made His Mouth Water.

An ex-cannibal's regrets were told by the bishop of Bunbury, Australia. The bishop formerly held the see of Melanesia, which comprises what used to be called the "Cannibal islands." There he had for servant a young native who, before his conversion, had been a cannibal. One day the bishop received, among presents from home a tin of sheep's tongues, on which he made a raid for his luncheon. The "boy" looked on, his mouth watering, but with perplexity writ large on his face. He afterward confessed that he thought the tongues were human, and that his episcopal master had relapsed into cannibalism. The dish reminded him of a delicacy which had been the delight of his unregenerate days.

A Cubist Puzzle.

The wife of a well-known cubist artist was returning from Spain to France. The customs officer, opened her baggage and discovered a remarkable canvas. The picture appeared to represent a collection of old iron, which had been strongly colored. The officer gazed with astonishment, mingled with suspicion, at the work of art. "That's my portrait," said the lady coldly. "Never!" retorted her examiner. "That must be the plan of a submarine or airplane!" An engineer as expert was called. He looked at the masterpiece for a long time and turned it round and round. Finally he said: "It is possibly a machine, but it will not explode!" On this the lady was allowed to depart.

Duty of Being Brave.

It is an everlasting duty, the duty of being brave. Valor is still value. The first duty of a man is still that of subduing fear. We must get rid of fear; we cannot act till then. A man shall and must be valiant, he must march forward. Now and always the completeness of his victory over fear will determine how much of a man he is.—Carlyle.

The music committee reported that five bands had been engaged for the day. The Ellsworth band cannot be here, as their members will have to work on that day. This number, together with the bands which the various organizations will have in line, ought to provide plenty of music for the occasion.

The committee also adopted a resolution requesting the Burgess to issue a proclamation prohibiting all hawking and vending by outsiders on that day. It developed during the discussion of this phase that other similar celebrations had been featured by fakirs who imposed on the public in the way of selling badges. It was the opinion of the committee, men that if there is to be any money made in such a transaction it should be handled by some local organization, preferably the Red Cross.

After requesting all committee chairmen to report to Prof. Daniel Saturday evening to prepare the program, the meeting adjourned to meet again next Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, to make final preparations for the event.

Know What Geode Is?

When next the reader goes on a trip to the mountains it will be well for him to keep a sharp lookout. Perhaps he may discover a geode. Probably he does not know how a geode should look, but if he chances upon one he will immediately recognize it. For a geode is one of the most wonderful things in nature, says a writer. In the beginning it was nothing more than a cavity in a rock. Then water trickled into the cavity, leaving a deposit containing many chemical elements. These elements in the course of time became crystals, and if they contained the necessary ingredients the crystals evolved into gems. Suppose for a moment that oxide of manganese became mixed with the crystals. Then they would turn to amethysts of a hue and beauty quite past description. It is the interior of a geode that is priceless. Some have been found in which a small amount of water still remained in their center, confined there for thousands, perhaps millions, of years. By turning them this way and that, the water could be plainly seen to move.

Sausage From Cottonseed.

The United States is certainly the "land of cotton," declares an exchange. Nowhere else in the world is cotton grown in such abundance, and put to such a variety of uses. The fiber, of course, is made into cloth; the oil from the seeds is used as a cheap substitute for olive oil and as a basis for lard, and now the seeds themselves are being ground into flour and used for food purposes, says Popular Science Monthly. Gingersnaps and jumbles are made from it, and it is mixed with finely chopped meat and tied in sausage links. To make the cottonseed sausage, three pounds of sausage meat is mixed with one pound of cottonseed flour. This flour is said to contain as much nutrition as the meat which it takes the place of, and to effect a saving of 8 cents a pound on the sausage.

Alertness for Mental Scuffle.

Wit sharpens wit. Every man that has been compelled to converse with his fellows knows the joys of being able to parley and parry mental sallies. Quick action needs room. You can't have it when your attic's full, says a writer. Remove everything that does not add to your working stock and there will be mental room and alertness for any scuffle. The fact that you are challenged puts you on your metal. Seeing you ready for mental combat stirs others to the same end. And that's good for the world. There's too much taking things as they come for the best progress. We need a little more getting things lined up for the best effectiveness. When the attic's clear you can take opportunity by the forelock and turn him where you will. When you are clogged with too much lumber you have to leave that to others. It doesn't pay.

Unrehearsed Incident.

A laughable incident—for all but one person—occurred at a circus some time ago, relates London Tit-Bits. The comic policeman had just come off victorious from a bout with the clown, and both had retired from the ring for a moment. A real policeman, on duty at the circus, took a short cut across the arena to quell a disturbance, and the clown, entering with a pair ofimps, took him for the sham man of law, and he and his imps fell upon the policeman, blinded him with flour, smothered him in soot, dragged him across the floor and hustled him out of the ring. When the real circus policeman, who had been a delighted spectator of the mistake, sprang into the ring the faces of the clown and the imps were a study. The audience, who had known the mistake all along, simply roared with laughter.

Be Contented.

Let none repine at their station and waste their time longing for other things than such as they have, greater things, more congenial, or things of apparently superior promise. The scale of our stewardship may be small, the items of it meager, the situation obscure, the duty to which we are called insipid and irksome in the extreme, yet in the faithful discharge of our obvious calling lie all the possibilities of discipline, all that is necessary to fit us for great destiny. Our constraining solicitude should be that we grasp the circumstances of the hour, learn their lessons, extract whatever they have to give of knowledge and strength.—Exchange.

With the Chaldeans.

The Chaldeans were a sturdy, agricultural race. The land in which they lived had great extremes of climate. The summers were dry and hot and the winters, especially in the rugged northern part, were cold. The rainfall was scant and water had to be carefully hoarded in reservoirs. Much of the land was dependent upon the floods of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers for irrigation, and a drought was sure to result in famine and suffering. Therefore the kings appointed astrologers to scrutinize the sky to foretell not the places of the moon and planets but the weather.

Thought He Was Growing.

Donald likes to go to the baker's, where he is sure to be given a cake or a bun. One day the baker gave him a small cookie, saying, "A very little cake, for a very little boy." Donald held it a moment and then handed it back, saying, with a charming smile, "Too bigger."

Mrs. Anna Hawthorne.

Thursday morning about 9 o'clock occurred the death of Mrs. Anna Hawthorne, wife of Arthur Hawthorne, at her home on Union street, aged 64 years. The cause of her death was hardening of the arteries, brought on from an attack of the flu last winter, from which she never fully recovered. Mrs. Hawthorne was born at Lima, O., and has lived in California for upwards of forty years. While her serious condition was known, she was in the best of spirits early Wednesday, therefore her sudden demise was not expected. She is survived by two brothers, Richard Fieldson, of Dickerson Run, and William Fieldson, of near Ronco, Pa., also by two sisters, Mrs. William Clark of near Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Philip Zang, of near Pittsburgh. She also leaves the following children: William Hawthorne of South Brownsville; Richard and Leonard Hawthorne of California; Mrs. Thomas L. Pollock of Charleroi; Mrs. J. A. Copeland, Newell; and Mrs. Bert C. Ross, of Olympia, Wash.

The funeral took place from the residence at 2 o'clock this afternoon with interment at Phillips cemetery.

American is Versatile.

At a certain well-known Swiss hotel, during one of his summer holidays in Switzerland, according to William V. Rowe in Case and Comment, Joseph H. Choate had just finished that distressing and gastronomically disappointing task, a table d'hôte dinner on the Swiss plan, when he was heartily greeted by an English gentleman who had sat at the opposite end of the table. The Englishman said: "We have been observing you, as an American, with much interest, and I want to ask you a very pertinent question, if I may. What are you by occupation or profession? Won't you be good enough to tell me, because my wife says you are a clergyman, my daughter insists you are an actor, and I say you are a lawyer. We can't all be right." "Yes, you can," instantly retorted Mr. Choate. "I am something of all three—three in one. I preach a good deal, act a little, and practice more or less law—which means that I am an American lawyer. Tell your wife and daughter you all guessed right."

Island of Santo Domingo.

It is incorrect to apply to the entire island the name of Haiti, as that was merely the aboriginal name for the western section (the present republic). The island should properly be called either Santo Domingo, by which it has been known for the greater part of the four centuries of the two names, Haiti-Santo Domingo. Another mistake that is made frequently is to refer to this republic as Santo Domingo. While the island may be properly called Santo Domingo, the correct name of the country is the Dominican Republic. Santo Domingo is not the name of a country, but of the capital and largest city of the Dominican republic. This island is also frequently confused with the island of Dominica. The latter is a small British island in the lesser Antilles, about 850 miles southeast of Puerto Rico, between the French islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique. As this island was discovered by Columbus on Sunday he called it Dominica.

Modern Ideas of Greatness.

When we ask what it is that we, moderns deem to constitute greatness among the men of our own or a comparatively recent time, we feel that the standard has somewhat changed. We set less store by monarchs, for they do not fill the stage of the world as they once did, although some of them have still large opportunities for doing good or harm. Neither do we give quite such special honor to military glory as former ages did. Nevertheless, the essential qualities that dazzle the eyes of man may be still the same. I speak chiefly of the greatness that consists in action, for the ruler, the statesman and the warrior do their work in the sight of the world and can be judged by it, whereas the poet or the philosopher may have long to wait for recognition and even a supreme scientific discovery may not be appreciated until long years have been spent in working out its applications.—The Youth's Companion.

Contagiousness of the Smile.

Anything which makes us smile produces within us the healthful excitation which gives us the pleasant emotions associated with smiling. The song which calls up the action of smiling in our minds calls up at the same time a mental echo of the actual experience and so puts us, as we sing it or hear it in a pleasant, happier frame and keeps us strong and well. There is much to show this. The contagiousness of a smile is quickly proved. Take a child into a crowded street car or elsewhere. If there is not a great counter attraction even the grumpiest crab around about will soon or late smile back at the cherub.—Exchange.

Origin of Cardinal's Red Hat.

It is a tradition that the red hat of the cardinal is due to the following circumstance: The Countess of Flanders complained to Innocent the Fourth that in a great assemblage she could not distinguish cardinals from abbots and other great personages of the church. Accordingly, at the council at Lyons in 1215, the pope prescribed that the red hat should replace the mitre; and ever since that time the symbol of the cardinal's rank has been a red hat. Since the year 1364 red robes have been worn by cardinals; the purple robes, which were decreed by Boniface the Eighth, are worn only in Lent and Advent.

Higher Mathematics.

One day during my grandson's third year I gave him several pieces of candy to divide with his little playmate, Virginia, says a contributor to an exchange. When he came into the house I asked him if he divided his candy with Virginia, and this was his reply: "Yes, grandma, I gave Virginia one piece and took one myself, then I gave her another piece and took another for myself, then there was one piece left and I ate that. Then we both had two pieces."

How Deaf is the Haddock?

How deaf is a haddock, asks a man whose hearing has become somewhat impaired and who says he is "as deaf as a haddock." But does not know exactly what that means. It is an old expression and has never been explained. Other phrases used to express varying degrees of auricular disability are "as deaf as an adder" and "as deaf as a white cat." As a matter of fact an adder is not deaf, but a multiplier or divider, and if white cats were subject to deafness in any of their former lives they certainly are not in the one they are now living. The implied imputation of exceptional deafness to the haddock contained in the proverbial phrase "as deaf as a haddock" recalls the fact that an ancient legend held that it was a haddock in whose mouth St. Peter found a piece of money and that the two marks on the fish's neck were the impression of the apostle's thumb and finger. Not only is there no proof of this, but the legend is incredible. Besides, the haddock is a salt water fish and was not found in any of the waters where Peter fished. Recurring to the original question it may be assumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the haddock is no deaf-er than other fish.—Exchange.

It's a Century Old.

Occasionally we come across some article of manufacture which has been improved upon year after year, only to return again to its original state as the most desirable. This is true of the pocket-knife. You will find it in all degrees of perfection and ornamentation, but the style most approved at the present moment is that of the old navy knife—invented no one knows how long ago. This knife is the instant action, drop-out type, and is made in two styles, either of which the jackie prefers above all modern pull-out and push-button types. The blade simply slides in a groove so that it is opened by the same movement which jerks it out of the pocket. When it has been fouled from long usage, the entire blade can be raked out and cleaned. The jackie prizes its simplicity when he is up aloft, with only one hand free, and when his fingers are stiff and numb. At such times any other kind would be useless.—Popular Science Monthly.

Camera Preserves Finger-Prints.

For police officers and others who have need of getting finger-print evidence from material that cannot be preserved or removed from its environment, a special camera has been perfected. It takes a photograph of the finger-print wherever it may be. In operating the camera no photographic skill or experience, nor even a tripod, is necessary. The camera is held tight against the surface of the door, ceiling, wall paper, or wherever the finger-print has been made. The shutter release lever is then pressed down; this automatically closes the circuit of the four lamps inside the camera, and thus lights them, providing the illumination for the exposure. The necessary current is provided by storage batteries inside the camera.—Popular Science Monthly.

Differences of Opinion.

When I hear another express an opinion which is not mine, I say to myself: He has a right to his opinion, as I to mine; why should I question it? His error does me no injury, and shall I become a Don Quixote, to bring all men by force of argument to one opinion? If a fact be misstated, it is probable he is gratified by a belief of it, and I have no right to deprive him of the gratification. If he wants information, he will ask it, and then I will give it in measured terms; but if he still believes his own story, and shows a desire to dispute the fact with me, I hear him and say nothing. It is his affair, not mine, if he prefers error.—Thomas Jefferson.

Mark Twain's Pleasant Little Speech.

In one of Mark Twain's letters, published in Harper's Magazine, appears an account of his visit to the Jameson raiders when they were in prison in Pretoria, in South Africa, in 1896. He made a characteristic speech to them that seemed to amuse them immensely. "I advised them at considerable length," says the humorist, "to stay where they were—they would get used to it and like it presently; if they got out they would only get in somewhere else by the look of their countenances; and I promised to go and see the president and do what I could to get him to double their jail term."

Suggested a Postscript.

John was invited to Edward's birthday dinner, the invitation reading: "Will John come to Edward's house for dinner Tuesday evening?" He wrote in reply, "John will come to Edward's house to dinner Tuesday evening. He will come!" Betty could not understand that she was not invited and on hearing John read aloud his acceptance before sending it, said, plainly: "Well, John, just add a little to that and say Betty will come too."

It is customary when a Chinese dies to place the body in a wooden coffin, the wood being generally imported from China.

Gentle Hint.

Wearied Young Lady (hastening the departure of tedious youth)—I think we are going to have a beautiful winter.

The Profitable Nickel.

Like the humble cent, the increased courage of which was recently mentioned in this column, the nickel is a greater demand than ever. That is fortunate, for the face value of these "token coins" is so much greater than the value of the metal they contain that the profit in manufacturing them, together with a slight profit in manufacturing the minor silver coins, more than meets the entire running expenses of the mint.—Youth's Companion.

Why Diamond Is Prized.

Of practical uses the diamond is not quite destitute—it is, for instance, the best of all abrasives—but these practical uses have almost or quite nothing to do with its popular esteem. That rests first on the poor claims established by cost and scarcity, and, second, on the survival in human beings of the ancient and savage delight in hanging about and fastening to the body bits of stone and metal that are brightly colored or shiny.

Australian Pearls.

Pearls that come from the coast of Australia are of many shapes and colors. Those under ten grains are sold by the ounce, above that by the grain. Color has a deal to do with the value. The white pearls go mostly to Europe and the yellow ones to India. In Australia an ounce of good white pearls will fetch up to $100, but sometimes realize only a fifth of that amount. The yellow pearls may be rated on an average of about half the value of the white ones.

To Remove Grease.

The following method, described in Popular Science Monthly, has been substituted for the use of gasoline and other light oils: Boil the parts in caustic soda lye; one pound to a gallon of water; then brush while the articles are hot. Caustic soda is recommended as better than ordinary soda, since it causes the fat or grease to dissolve more quickly.

Taboo.

When anything is forbidden, or its exclusion is ordered, English-speaking people sometimes say it is "taboo." The word is derived from a custom once common in Polynesia and New Zealand. It signifies something set apart or prohibited because of its being either sacred or accursed. The system originated in a superstitious dread of the invisible powers of evil.

For Outdoor Chess Games.

Chessmen, which range from two to three and one-half feet in height made of aluminum, collapsible, and packed in a special trunk, have been given to the library of the University of Wisconsin. A Milwaukee man, now dead, designed them for use in public contests, on large indoor or outdoor chess boards, with a view to increasing popular interest in the game.

Step Higher Up.

If all our actions and motives in daily life could be actuated by a subconscious and all-permeating idea of fitting ourselves as we go along step by step for figurative ladders of recommendation as to our ability to capably hold the next trench ahead, how surely would our foes of slackness, dilatoriness and incompetence be routed.

Easily Arranged.

A woman invited Ed to come and see her. He asked if she had a little boy to play with him and she said no. He then asked if she would like to have a little boy, and when she said yes Ed replied: "My mamma will tell stork that brought me to her to bring you a little boy."

Give Plants Air and Light.

If potted plants are set in jardinières, be sure no water stands in them and that the jardinière is large enough to permit of circulation of air around it. Plants need light, pure air, and cleanliness as much as human beings.

Fidelity in Small Things.

Fidelity in small things is at the base of every great achievement. We too often forget this, and yet no truth needs more to be kept in mind, particularly in the troubled eras of history and in the crises of individual life.—Charles Warner.
